Conclusion

- Philips Kotler in his latest book being launched in June 2010 with the title Marketing 3.0 unravels the journey of Global Market from products to customers to the human spirit and suggests that the companies today are being challenged globally to move from marketing 2.0 to marketing to 3.0 because consumers were looking towards companies not only to satisfy their needs but also problems in the society and their capacity to link their socially responsible activities with issues like MDGs
- No wonder therefore that UN Secretary Generals' Vision 2000 calling upon business enterprises to embrace 10 Principles of Global Compact relating to human rights, labor rights, environment and anti-corruption has today within a period of 10 years become the central theme of professional marketers for the current and the following decades as a guarantee for business survival and sustainability.
